Completed in 1897 and formerly known as the Springler Building, the building is an Italian Renaissance-inspired structure rising 8 stories high. Directly overlooking Union Square Park, the building's loft-like spaces feature wood floors, high ceilings, tall architectural columns and large operable windows that provide an abundance of natural light and beautiful park views.

The neighborhood provides easy access to a myriad of amenities including Union Square's renowned farmers' market, both casual and upscale restaurants and varied retail, including the city's largest Barnes & Noble only steps away.

Situated in the middle of Manhattan, the building's location provides for easy access to both uptown and downtown via Union Square subway station which directly connects to the L, N, Q, R, W, 4, 5 and 6 trains.

UNION SQUARE

Dominated by Union Square Park which occupies over seven acres, the district runs from the square's base at 14th Street, a block beyond its northern edge, to 18th Street and a block west and east to Fifth Avenue and Irving Place respectively.

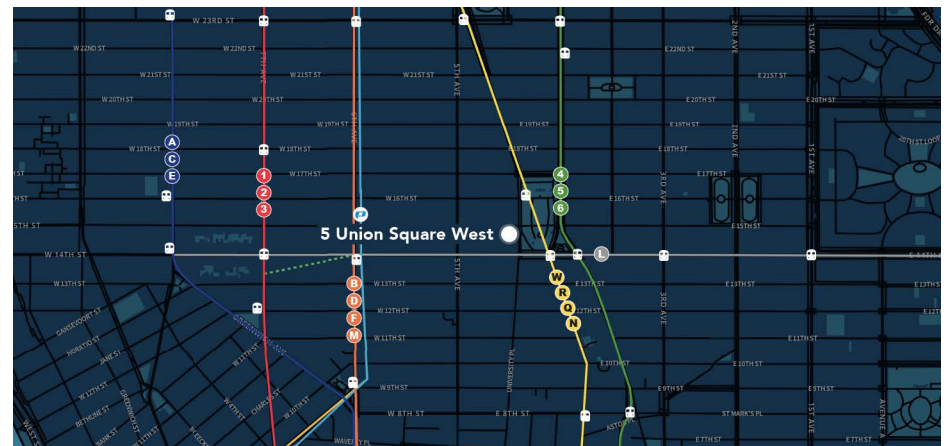

Surrounding the square are numerous buildings that evoke its rich history, many dating back to the 19th century. Fine examples include the Romanesque Lincoln Building at 1 Union Square West and the narrow Decker Building at 33 Union Square West with its Italian and Islamic influences – and where Warhol once had his Factory.

Packing retail, dining, commercial and residential space together, this is one part of New York that really rarely sleeps. The year-round farmers' market runs from 8am to 6pm four days per week, with tens of thousands coming to browse and buy fresh produce and flowers through the day. The square is a continuous hive of activity and is a major meeting point for people. Shoppers come to a variety of stores including Forever 21, Sephora and New York's largest Barnes & Noble, set over 4 stories in a landmark building on the north side.

The area offers many destinations for food and drink. The iconic Coffee Shop located at 27 Union Square West serves diner classics to a cool crowd from morning till late night, while Blue Water Grill offers premium seafood in impressive surroundings.

Major tenants in the area include Facebook's second NYC campus, Dropbox, Hulu, Mashable and Compass. The area is expecting a wave of new tech firms with approval now granted to create the ambitious Union Square Tech Training Center on 14th Street.

14th Street-Union Square Station is a major hub with access to the N,Q,R,W,4,5,6 and L trains.
