71 THOMAS STREET

71 THOMAS STREET

71 Thomas Street was completed in 1891 in an Italianate style by the architectural firm of Jardine, Hill & Murdock. This seven-story store building was originally an addition to H.B. Claflin & Co.'s mammoth wholesale dry goods store which occupied almost the entire block bounded by West Broadway, Worth Street, Church Street, and Thomas Street at the turn of the century. Today, the building functions as a courthouse for the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Located in Manhattan's upscale and trendy Tribeca, the neighborhood offers a wide variety of dining options, from casual to upscale, including The Odeon, Arcade Bakery or Mr. Chow. Additionally, the neighborhood offers an array of boutique and upscale retailers as well as many high-end art galleries. With access to the 1, 2 and 3 trains only a few blocks away, and additional subway lines easily accessible on foot, the building is convenient for all commuters.

TRIBECA

The Triangle Below Canal Street, Tribeca is now famous across the globe as the home of the Tribeca Film Festival as well as being also one of the oldest neighborhoods in the city. Signs of its history can be seen in the old brick buildings that coexist with ultra-modern towers, an aspect which is particularly noticeable by the Hudson waterfront.

With art galleries, boutique shops, bars and restaurants – and as a magnet for celebrities and celebrity chefs alike – there is no shortage of fine dining experiences to serve the luxury residences and commercial tenants to be found in the area.

Iconic destinations include The Odeon and Bubby's, which sit alongside neighborhood favorites like Scalini Fedeli with its beautiful vaulted ceiling and Atera with its inventive countertop tasting menu. The lunch crowd can indulge in delicious cakes at Baked or a morning espresso at Gotan on Franklin Street, and on Wednesdays sample the local Greenmarket, which is also a regular Saturday fixture.

Tribeca's 40 Worth Street is home to the East Coast headquarters of GAP, Inc, with Citigroup's global headquarters situated nearby on Greenwich Street.

Subway transportation is provided by the 1, 2, 3, A, C, and E lines, with the N, Q, R, W and 4, 5, 6 a quick walk away to the north east.
